THE PRODUCTS OF HAWAII

The figures of growth since the annexation of Hawaii to the United States—and indeed, since the reciprocity treaty of 1875 between the islands and the United States by which freedom of commercial interchange with this country was established and investments of American capital thus assured—are extremely interesting. A table shows, for example, the production of sugar, by far the most important product of the Hawaiian islands, from 1875 down to and including 1911. The production of sugar in 1875, the year immediately prior to the adoption of the reciprocity treaty, is given at 25,000,000 pounds; by 1881 it had grown to 94,000,000 pounds; in 1891, 275,000,000; in 1901, 691,000,000; in 1911, 1,111,000,000, or forty times as much in 1911 as in 1875. The value, which was stated at $1,250,000 in 1875, was given at $38,750,000 in 1911, or thirty times as much in 1911 as in 1875. Thus the quantity of sugar produced in 1911 is forty times as great as in the year immediately prior to the beginning of the reciprocity and the value thirty times as great, the relative difference in increase between quantity and value being due, of course, to a reduction in prices of sugar meantime.

Of this increase of practically 1,000,000,000 pounds in the sugar production of the Hawaiian islands since the adoption of the reciprocity agreement with the United States more than one-half has developed since annexation, which occurred in the year 1898. The sugar production of 1897, the year immediately prior to that of annexation, was, according to the table in question, 520,000,000 pounds, as against 25,000,000 in 1875, the year immediately preceding the reciprocity treaty; 1,111,000,000 pounds in 1910 and 1,611,000,000 in 1911. Thus the increase in sugar production in the islands during the twenty-two years of reciprocity, 1875 to 1898, was 495,000,000 pounds, and during the period since annexation, 1898 to 1910, was 592,000,000 pounds.

Sugar, however, is not the only product of the Hawaiian islands. The statements show numerous other articles or products of the islands, indicating that the recent attempts at diversification of production have been at least moderately successful. The value of canned pineapples sent to the United States alone in the fiscal year 1911 was over $2,000,000; of rice, the quantity shipped to this country from Hawaii in that year was 6,666,000 pounds; of coffee, 2,750,000 pounds; of bananas, 171,000 bunches; while of manufactures of wood and value of the shipments in 1911 was about $146,000. By far the largest item of shipment to the United States is sugar, valued in the fiscal year 1911 at $34,750,000, and $42,666,000 in 1910 against $1,250,000 in 1875, the year of the reciprocity treaty.—Department of Commerce and Labor.

POOR BOOZE.

Why drink the stuff made in some retailer's back room when you can buy real Kentucky Bourbon at Melzer Bros. Wholesale Liquor store? Get the best, you will not regret it and if you buy it of us it is bound to be the best of its kind for we carry no other. "Old Rutledge" makes the native Kentucky smack his lips and he knows what's what in whiskies.

ARIZONA'S INAUGURAL

Ball is a decidedly unique affair. When the committee having the arrangements in charge, were looking for a place to hold this out door dance, they choose the street in front of the Hotel Adams because it was one of the paved highways and the inaugural reception was to be held in this hotelery, where all the big things are held.

THE ARIZONA OSTRICH

Has the most beautiful feathers used in the adornment of women's hats, to be found in the United States and every woman who comes to Phoenix to spend the winter, longs to take a handsome plume home with her. Hanks of the Big Curlew who have been in business here for 25 years, is closing out his ostrich feathers at a great discount as he is going out of business.

THE CLEVER FRENCH.

Are noted for their taste in dress, the economy of their cooking and the pliancy of their sauces. They are also famed for their methods of Dry Cleaning, which removes spots, dust and grime without leaving a streaked, mousy surface on the gown. The French Dry Cleaning is done in Phoenix by Mrs. Wilson of the Arizona Dyeing and Cleaning Works.

HE'S SOME MAN.

The one who rides to his business in an auto and doesn't spend his time waiting for street cars. He should succeed at his undertakings for he has almost twice as much time to devote to them as the man who toils or walks. The American and Royal machines sold by the Standard Auto Co. will soon save their price in the extra money they allow you to make.

CREEDS, POLITICAL AND OTHERWISE.

Usually have some beautiful ideas involved in them, take socialism for instance—its plan of cooperation is an ideal theory but the hitch comes when they try to work it out. The Farmer's Creamery Co. 27 N. 3rd St. is co-operative in its plan and works out admirably for both the farmer and the customer. You can buy your butter "straight from the cow."

THE ART OF THE NAVAJOS.

Is shown in the handsome blankets they weave. Other Indians make blankets but this tribe is noted the world over for this kind of work. H. H. McNeil Co., licensed Indian traders, are expecting a new shipment of Navajo blankets at once which will sell from $5 to $125 each. No finer or more typical present for the folks back home could be found. See them.

THE R IN THE MONTH.

Will soon be gone when it will not be possible to purchase oysters until next fall. Tribolet's market makes a specialty of fish and oysters and has a cold storage plant that enables it to keep these denizens of the deep just as fresh as when they were in their native haunts. It is not good for them to be put on ice, but cold storage keeps an even temperature.

SELLING NOSEGAYS.

Is not particularly pleasant or profitable, to judge from the appearance of the flower girls of the large cities but wearing nosegays is delightful. Not every woman who has a love of posies can afford to buy daily bouquets, but every woman can purchase Cream of Flowers from Elvey and Hueltel and always wear the odor of a flower bed on her face. 50 cents a jar.

The Poker Lesson

By R. F. FOSTER.

(Copyright, 1910, by the Pearson Publishing Co.)

Watkins had no more cash. Frank did not like to tell Maxwell what he had, as Maxwell had loaned the money to bet against him. It was getting late, and while Watkins, the barkeeper and Frank were discussing the possibility of getting a loan on the boat, the two colonels went off to bed. The barkeeper was sure he could find a man who would loan five hundred dollars to bet on a sure thing like four aces, but every one had gone to bed and they would have to wait until morning.

There was no sleep for Frank that night. A thousand times he cursed himself for ever having gone into the game, and then for his folly in consenting to the change from the safer game of table stakes, and then for his not having quit when he was ahead, and so on through the whole gamut of vain regrets that every gambler indulges in after he has lost his money. One thing he was resolved on: he was done with poker for all time.

Morning came, and he was on the deck almost at dawn, looking for the appearance of the barkeeper, who was to find a man with five hundred dollars to loan for five minutes, to bet on a hand that couldn't lose.

Colonel Draper was the first to come into the saloon. He pulled out his watch, and then peered out of the window at the shore to see how far down the river they were.

"You will never get this thing fixed up in time," he began. "The best thing you can do is to go on down the river with us and take your time about it. What do you think, Tom?" this being addressed to the barkeeper, who had just joined them.

"That's right, Colonel," he answered decisively, and then whispered confidentially to Frank: "Let that contract job go hang. There's two thousand dollars in that envelope for you if you stick to it. If you jump the boat, you don't get a cent of it."

As the minutes slipped away, Frank felt himself going mad. When he asked the barkeeper how soon that man with the money to loan would probably get up, all the answer he got was a shrug. When he asked the clerk how soon the boat was due at his landing, he was told in half an hour. "If it were not for Jennie," he thought to himself, "I would chuck that contract and my job with Stanley and Hobart and everything else. With two thousand dollars capital in my pocket, what do I care?"

If it were not for Jennie! That was all that held him to his duty when Colonel Draper approached him just as the gong rang for breakfast and asked him whether he had decided to go ashore or stay and settle that little bet. There was no hope of raising the money to decide the matter before the boat reached Frank's destination now. The clerk came to them and told them he was looking up the safe, as he had to attend to the freight and would not open the safe again until the boat left the landing.

Frank saw that the decisive moment had come: to stay on the boat or to stay with Stanley and Hobart. Just then it flashed across him that, even if he let the whole thing go and abandoned that two thousand dollars, all he was actually losing was the ten dollars he started with. The rest was all velvet.

The appearance of Watkins, all dressed for the shore, dispelled this illusion instantly. How about the three hundred he had borrowed from him. Watkins sat down beside Frank at the table.

"I guess I'll have to have that three hundred from you right away," he began, in a tone that made Frank shiver.

"I go ashore here, and I must have the money to pay expenses. You go on down the river, I believe."

Frank confessed that he was going ashore also, and then he suddenly resolved to make a clean breast of the whole thing, telling Watkins the fix he was in, between the contract and the poker bet.

"That's funny," remarked Watkins after a pause. "I am after that contract myself."

"Then I must get the money to call that bet somehow," exclaimed Frank. "You saw my hand and you know it is a certainty. Can't you think of any way to raise the money? I will pay you a hundred per cent. interest—anything you want; but I must get out of this hole somehow."

"So you are going to put in a bid for Stanley and Hobart?" continued Watkins, totally ignoring Frank's anxiety about the poker bet.

"Yes, but good heavens! I must have five hundred to call that bet first. If I don't get it before I leave the boat, I not only lose every cent of that two thousand dollars but I can't pay you."

"Well," continued Watkins dreamily, as if he were thinking out a knotty problem. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I couldn't raise enough money to call that bet even if I had a derrick, and I don't see any show for your getting it in the next ten minutes—the boat's blowing for our landing now. But I'll tell you what I'll do," he repeated slowly: "I'll call it square on the three hundred you owe me if you will agree to put in Stanley and Hobart's bid at a figure that I will name when we get to the hotel ashore. How does that strike you?"

WHERE DO YOU CACHE YOUR CASH?

Don't hide your money in the chimney in the summer and then make a row when somebody builds a fire under it and burns it up, the first cold day in the fall. Don't cache your cash in your hoary because you'll lose it if you kick and you'll kick if you lose it. Put it in the National Bank of Arizona. Both checkings and deposit Accounts.

HIS SPEECH WAS UNLADYLIKE

To say the least but a broken collar edge is as irritating to the feelings as a boil on the back of the neck. Many a man has used "cuss" words because he found that the only collar in his possession had been ruined in ironing and gouged him in the throat until he could get to the nearest store. Patronize the Treg Laundry and keep on grinning.

BUY A BARGAIN

Of a bona fide company that you know, Berryhill's Big Book store is offering its patrons one half the original cost price of their old fountain pens. If they will purchase a new Waterman Ideal. Everybody uses fountain pens nowadays and this is an opportunity that is not likely to be repeated soon. Linen finish writing paper, half price.

THE MILLER OF THE DEE

"I care for nobody but not I, and nobody cares for me" but it is to be hoped that people felt differently about the products of his mill. At least Phoenix people are beginning to understand the value of the home flour, Star and Ruby put out by the Phoenix Flour Mills. One is a bread and the other a pastry flour. Buy at home—boast home products.

IF A HASSAYAMPER

Named the Hassayampa Creamery Co. he was certainly looking up steam when he drank, for though their products are good, they are not too good to be true and you can never tell the truth after drinking of the notorious Hassayampa, if you are looking down stream at the time. Hassayampa butter in summer time doesn't taste like ancient eggs and the milk is pasteurized.

A CAUTIOUS MAN

Never buys real estate without getting an abstract of title which guarantees a perfect copy of the records and he can then tell if he has a title without flaw. The conscientious abstracter will point out any apparent flaws, and if possible tell how they may be corrected. See the Arizona Abstract Co., 134 W. Washington.

A LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL

If it is prettily made and really meant, may be an excellent thing in woman but you will have to buy the ring just the same young man. She will not be satisfied with any thing but a solitaire and to pick good diamonds, you will need the advice of an expert. The biggest and best stock in the city is at Hildebrand's.

CUT SOME ICE.

Or if you can't find ice to cut here in Satan's summer resort, get a mesquite axe and chop wood. You will be surprised how easily you can do it with one of the axes made especially for this work, of the best steel carefully ground. Talk to Talbot and Hubbard about these implements. At the Sign of the Dog.

McDONALD IS A SCOTCHMAN.

With all the goodness of his plaid elad progenitors in addition to the shrewdness which he has acquired from his Yankee associates and he worked double shift when he invented the delicious chocolates which bear his name. Here's a tip to the girl that loves the brown coated confectionery in summer time—you can buy McDonald's any day in the year at Ruffin's, 5 W. Washington.

A DOPE FIEND RAN AMUCK.

Because he couldn't get the stuff to hit the pipe at Bowker's Drug store though of course the juice of the poppy is kept for use in filling doctor's prescriptions. All the other ingredients necessary for this exacting work are also kept in stock and the compounding is done by trained and experienced druggists.
